7.	Application of Jones Act to non-American seamen in mineral and oil industries.	262
8.	Duties of an employer under the FELA and Jones Act.	262
	(a) Employer is not a guarantor of safety of seamen: proof of common law negligence attributable to the employer is only basis of liability.	262
	(b) General duties.	263
	(c) Seamen as wards of admiralty.	263
	(d) Negligence attributable to employer, including vicarious liability for actions of employees and agents.	263
	(e) Under Jones Act, FELA duties apply to all employers of seamen, not only "common carriers".	263
	(f) Violation of safety statute as negligence.	263
	(1) Negligence per se	263
	(2) Safety statute must apply to activity.	264
	(3) Negligence per se : comparative fault negated.	264
	(4) Presumption of causation from a breach of a general safety regulation.	264
	(5) Requirement of causal relationship.	264
	(6) Are OSHA regulations "safety statutes"?	264
	(7) OSHA regulations apply to "uninspected vessels".	265
	(8) OSHA regulations do not apply to "inspected vessels".	265
	(9) OSHA regulations apply to towing vessels until Coast Guard inspection regulations are effective.	266
	(10) Breach of employer's Safety Management Plan under ISM Code.	266
	(11) Violation of Certificate of Inspection.	266
	(12) Violation of maximum hour statutes: fatigue contributing to casualty.	266
	(13) Are state safety regulations "safety statutes"?	266
	(14) Breach of accident/injury reporting regulations.	266
	(g) Reasonably safe place to work.	266
